Third Quarter 2017

HUDSON VALLEY LUXURY REAL ESTATE MARKET OVERVIEW

Columbia, Dutchess and Ulster County residential sales over $750,000

The weather was warm, but the Hudson Valley luxury real estate market cooled slightly during the months of July, August and September following a string of five back-to-back strong quarters. Barring a cataclysmic development, 2017 nonetheless remains on track to be the market's busiest in at least five years.

Thirty-nine properties sold in the three-county region during the third quarter, down from 46 in the year-earlier third quarter. That brought the number of sales for the first nine months of the year to 134, just 13 shy of the total for all of 2016.

A closer look at the data reveals that the downturn in sales was attributable entirely to a pullback at the upper end of the market. Among homes priced in the $750,000 to $999,000 range, for example, the number of sales actually increased year over year, to 27 from 22. But in every price category above $1 million, the number of sales declined. The falloff was particularly noticeable in the $1 million to $1,999,999 category, where the number of sales fell to eight from 17. And for the second quarter this year, there were no sales above $4 million.

National data indicates that demand for luxury properties remains high overall, although short-term sales and pricing trends have been mixed from region to region.

In New York City, for example, Manhattan's luxury real estate market experienced its worst third quarter in five years in terms of the number of contracts signed and the dollar volume of sales. Meanwhile, on Long Island, the Hamptons saw an 8 percent increase in both the number of homes sold and the dollar volume of sales.

Nationally, luxury home prices rose nearly 5 percent in the third quarter, year over year, a phenomenon attributed in part to an inventory shortage. Here, too, however, results were mixed by region. Our region bucked the national trend, with the median sale price for the quarter falling to $877,000 from $1,036,000 a year earlier.

Luxury properties in the Hudson Valley market did sell notably faster in the latest quarter, taking an average of just 147 days to close versus 190 a year earlier. Sellers also were able to complete their sales closer to their asking price, as the average listing discount narrowed to -7.3 percent from -9.2 percent. These figures, paired with continued strong traffic in our office, lead us to believe that Hudson Valley's luxury housing market remains fundamentally sound.

Columbia County

Activity slowed across all price ranges in Columbia County, with the number of sales falling for a third consecutive quarter to nine, down from 10 a year earlier and a recent peak of 17 in this year's first quarter. While it is impossible to make predictions with any certainty, there appears to be opportunity for activity to pick up in the final quarter of the year. Most significantly, the number of homes for sale in Columbia County has remained steadier than in Dutchess or Ulster counties. In addition, homes that sold in the third quarter here moved quickly, selling in just 109 days on average.

Three towns accounted for twothirds of the county's sales: Claverack, which is east of Hudson in the center of the county; Chatham, about 16 miles northeast of Claverack; and Copake, about 12 miles to the southeast. Copake is adjacent to Copake Lake, a 1.3mile long, 410-acre body of water attractive to fishermen, with a plentiful population of largemouth and smallmouth bass and yellow and white perch. Among those now able to enjoy views of that lake and the Catskill Mountains behind it are the new owners of a 2,592-squarefoot custom contemporary in

Sotheby's

Copake located on five acres just above the lake. The two-story dwelling sold for $809,500, a figure that also netted the buyers partial ownership in lake waterfront controlled by a local homeowner's association.

Dutchess County

Luxury home sales in Dutchess County have held remarkably steady over the last five quarters, ranging from a low of 18 in last year's fourth quarter and a high of 22 in the quarter before that. In the latest three-month period, 19 homes sold for a median price of $995,000, highest in the three-county region. Those sales included nine properties that sold between $1 million and $4 million.

Situated in the heart of the Hudson Valley luxury market, Dutchess County always serves up a wide range of appealing properties to potential buyers. Among the standouts in the latest quarter were a smallish, 1,904-square-foot, three-bedroom house in the town of Washington, and a much larger 8,541-square-foot mansion in Rhinebeck. The properties sold for $3,500,000 and $3,100,000, respectively. While small, the Washington house sits on nearly 142 acres of land just minutes from the village of Millbrook, with panoramic views of the surrounding countryside. The Rhinebeck house includes less land — 12 acres — but its location, too, is one of its main attractions, with stunning views of the Hudson River and Catskill Mountains.

Ulster County

In line with the regional trend, total sales of luxury homes in Ulster County fell slightly during the third quarter, to 11 from 14 a year earlier, but actually rose in the sub-$1 million sector of the market, to 10 from nine. In addition, homes here sold closer to their asking price — just 3.6 percent below list, on average — than anywhere else in the valley.

The most rugged of the valley's three counties, Ulster can sometimes offer buyers a bit more home and property for their money, in terms of size, than its more easterly neighbors. The largest transaction in the county during the third quarter was the $1,575,000 sale of a modernist, 3,400-square-foot house on 12 acres of land just five minutes from the village center in Woodstock. The house features a mix of exterior building materials, including wood panels, cement board, and floor-to-ceiling glass. It was built in the style of the Eames Case Study No. 8 house in the Pacific Palisades, which was constructed in 1949 based on plans drawn up by husband-and-wife designers Charles and Ray Eames.

Another notable sale in Ulster County took place 25 miles south of Woodstock in Accord, where the buyer's focus was likely less on the building — a 1,386-square-foot log cabin — and more on the land that came with it: a 154-acre parcel adjacent to Minnewaska State Park.

Commentary

Little changed on the macroeconomic front that would explain the modest slowdown in sales in the Hudson Valley luxury real estate market during the third quarter. The U.S. economy continued to perform well, as did the stock market, and interest rates remained low. The number of homes available for sale may have had a minor impact; available inventory has averaged 431 properties through the first three quarters of the year, down from 522 through the first three quarters of 2016.

Against this backdrop, we continue to see a great deal of traffic through our office, and, as we noted in our second-quarter report, we have recently experienced an uptick in listings at the high end of the market.

Taking all these factors into account, we remain cautiously optimistic about the outlook for the Hudson Valley luxury real estate market. Our region has served as a retreat and a haven for generations of families, and we are confident it will hold its appeal for many generations to come.
